TEA PARTY ROOTS

Some credit Chicago rant for birth of movement

Chicago Tribune

For some Tea Partiers, Rick Santelli ranks with the Founding Fathers.

Two years ago, the CNBC reporter famously lost it in the middle of a live broadcast from the floor of the Chicago Mercantile Exchange, giving rise to a larger movement. For some Tea Party faithful, the Santelli rant still serves as a rally point.

Monday morning, thousands of Tea Party demonstrators are expected to gather at Daley Plaza to vent their frustrations with high taxes and big government.

"If [Santelli] wanted to know how it feels to be treated like a god on Earth, all he needs to do is show up on Monday," said Steve Stevlis, director of the Chicago Tea Party Patriots. "We will put him on our shoulders and carry him around the city."

On Feb. 19, 2009, while talking about the proposed federal mortgage relief plan, the west suburban native became impassioned, lambasting the Obama administration and calling for revolt.

"We're thinking of having a Chicago Tea Party in July," Santelli shouted, drawing cheers from traders in the pit. "All you capitalists that want to show up to Lake Michigan, I'm gonna start organizing."

While Santelli's role in the Tea Party's creation is not universally accepted, some trace its roots to that rant.

"In retrospect, I think I was the lightning rod for many Americans to address their frustration with overspending and lack of representation of both political parties," Santelli said Friday via email.

Within days, some who sympathized with Santelli answered his call, and Tea Party organizations have been popping up around the country ever since. In Illinois, there are roughly 90 local chapters across the state, said Denise Cattoni of the Illinois Tea Party organization.

"I give [Santelli] complete credit for sparking the modern day movement with those two words—Tea. Party," said Stevlis, who attended the first Chicago rally a week after the rant.

Though he never has been active in the Tea Party, Santelli recognizes what followed.

"Whether one agrees with their philosophy or not, the larger vision of so many people so active and so involved is uniquely American," he said.

But while Santelli's rant struck a chord for some who would join the movement, for others, his words were lost in a growing chorus of political dissent.

Said University of Chicago political science professor John Brehm, "I thought it was a temper tantrum."

Google vs. Bing? No clear winner

Be honest: When you search for something online, your fingers pretty much type "google.com" on their own.

But is that about to change?

Mashable.com published an interesting piece last week about search engines—specifically, whether Bing is closing in on Google's seemingly insurmountable lead.

Citing data from Experian Hitwise, the mashable.com report shows Bing growing at a rapid pace—rapid enough for people in the social media space to start questioning how long Google can remain on top.

This isn't happening overnight; Experian Hitwise says Google was responsible for 64.42 percent of U.S. searches in March while Bing—which also includes search.yahoo.com—handled 30 percent.

The theory is that if the current trend continues, Bing and Google would collide like an asteroid slamming into a planet in January 2012. Hmmm. The Mayans did predict the end of the world that year—maybe that's what all the fuss was about.

Now here's where the devil on my shoulder appears, ready to throw a wrench in this scenario. We can't discount social media in the search engine wars. While my browser has a dedicated window for Google—which, by the way, I can change to Bing if I want—I find myself relying on search.twitter.com much more often.

Working at a newspaper, I've known for a long time that people break news faster than the news breaks news. Stories sometimes play out from start to finish before they get much more than a blip on major websites. When the Charlie Sheen news was hitting critical mass and I needed to search for content to supplement news stories on our website, I was using Twitter search. Google was pretty much useless.

Bing has another thing going for it: Users are suckers for things that are pretty. Say what you want about Google, but there's nothing pretty about it—other than those awesome doodles they do for holidays and birthdays. Go to bing.com and google.com right now and there's a clear aesthetic winner.

Plus, if Facebook gets into the search game and becomes a go-to place for finding stuff, the game's pretty much over. The days of going to different places to do different things online are numbered. Think about how Apple combined all your devices into a single pocket-friendly one and you get the idea.

How do you search? Are your habits changing? Tweet me, poke me—just tell me. Bonus: You don't need Google or Bing to find me.

MILLION DOLLAR BABIES

NO MANSION IS COMPLETE WITHOUT A PARTY ROOM OR ELEVATOR, RIGHT?

By Kyra Kyles

REDEYE

Stunning views of Oak Street Beach, an 800-square-foot coach house and a sun-drenched, top-floor party room.

If you have any of these features in your own home, you may want to stop reading now. RedEye just might bore you to death with talk of condos and mansions offering amenities such as six fireplaces, Roman bathtubs in the basement, in-house elevators and living space equaling or exceeding 7,000 square feet.

But if you're drooling over the notion of living in a million- or multimillion-dollar home right here in Chicago, read on.

Moneyed Chicagoans are snapping up million-dollar homes amid the still-flagging real estate market, according to a recent study by home-sales research firm DataQuick. Spokesman Andrew LePage said Chicago is among 20 major metro areas—including San Diego and L.A.—that are seeing an approximate 10.5 percent increase in sales of these million-dollar babies since 2009, based on DataQuick's analysis of public records.

Cash deals are king with these properties as some buyers seek a swanky "city apartment" as a second residence and others look for a home suite home, according to local agents.

While one rep for Chicago real estate firm Baird & Warner says there is not a significant spike in luxury home sales, according to listings data from 2009 and 2010, some agents from other firms say they are seeing an anecdotal uptick among wealthy buyers eager to get back into the real estate game.

Those who are house-hunting have their pick in a number of hot 'hoods, according to agents who identified mansions in areas including Kenwood, Bronzeville and Hyde Park on the South Side; Lakeview and Lincoln Park on the North Side; and Streeterville and the Gold Coast downtown.

"These are clients who can make cash deals," real estate agent Connie Atterbury of Dream Town said during a recent visit to a Streeterville property listed for approximately $2.1 million. She said potential buyers for the property at 180 E. Pearson St. get stunning views "almost to Michigan" and can say that Oprah Winfrey once lived in the building, which is adjacent to the Water Tower. The space has three bedrooms and two and a half bathrooms.

"They've been doing better business-wise since the stock market has picked up and they think, 'I might as well park my money somewhere,'" Atterbury said of buyers. "Why not somewhere like a luxury, in-town apartment that they can actually make use of?"

In Bronzeville, Coldwell Banker agent Venetia Johnson said 30-something professionals make up most of the potential buyers that have crowded into the approximately 8,000-square-foot, $2.5 million mansion at 4750 S. Drexel Blvd. With five bedrooms, four full bathrooms and two half-bathrooms, the renovated house, which was never occupied by the owner, has a coach house out back atop a two-car garage.

"We definitely attract cash buyers," Jackson said, while walking across the marble floor of a spacious first-floor bathroom. "It's still hard to get one of the jumbo loans you'd need for a house that costs in this range. But there are people willing to bring cash to the table for a chance to live here."

Agents for the mansions say they limit public open houses to avoid allowing aimless oglers inside these stunning spaces. But don't fret—RedEye's got your virtual key to unlocking how the other half lives. Check out our real estate roundup of the $1 million-plus penthouses and mansions on the market that DataQuick deemed in demand. Spoiler alert: Two of the three have elevators. KKYLES@TRIBUNE.COM

Address: 180 E. Pearson St.
Neighborhood: Streeterville

Listing Price:

$2.1 MILLION

Bed, bath and beyond: Three bedrooms, two full bathrooms and one half-bath

Size matters: About 7,000 square feet

Overview: This place allows its owners to eyeball either the Navy Pier Ferris wheel or Oak Street beach, depending on which room they're standing in. The penthouse—in the same Water Tower building where Oprah once lived—has most recently been used as an in-town apartment, thereby explaining away the slightly Austin Powers-esque decor in the kitchen and living room. But what it lacks in up-to-date decor, it compensates for in view and location, location, location, at least according to Dream Town's Connie Atterbury, the property's agent.

Most fab features:

- » Ear-popping elevator ride up to the 46th floor where the Navy Pier Ferris wheel looks a little like a toy from on high
- » Bragging rights the "O" once was a neighbor
- » Membership to the Ritz-Carlton Club and access to its pool and fitness center
- » A bidet in the master bath ... yes, one that Zach Galifianakis might appreciate, per that super-funny "Saturday Night Live" skit
- » Lake view from every angle of the property

Address: 2725 N. Kenmore Ave.
Neighborhood: Lincoln Park

Listing Price:

$2.5 MILLION

Bed, bath and beyond: Seven bedrooms, four full baths and three half-baths

Size matters: About 7,000 square feet

Overview: Built from the ground up by the owner, this home is decorated with a minimalist style and features huge glass windows and doors for maximum sun-drench effect. The four-level property features two decks and a basement space carved out to accommodate a full gym, as well as a marble Roman tub.

Most fab features:

- » His and her bathrooms in the master bedroom. The "his" bathroom features a huge steam shower and nozzle designed to rain gently down upon the occupant. The "her" version is an opulent, marble-laden space inspired by the owner's travels in Paris to the Hotel Costes.
- » Private elevator that can fit at least three (slim) individuals.
- » An official party room with its own kitchenette and seven skylights allowing every ounce of sunlight (or moonlight) in for guests.
- » A gourmet kitchen where almost all appliances are hidden under walnut cabinets. Aspiring cheftestants might dig the high-end WOLF twin ovens and stove-top grill.

Address: 4750 S. Drexel Blvd.
Neighborhood: Bronzeville

Listing Price:

$2.5 MILLION

Bed, bath and beyond: Five bedrooms, four bathrooms and two half-baths

Size matters: About 8,000 square feet

Overview: Originally built in 1892, according to Coldwell Banker agent Venetia Johnson, this Bronzeville mansion was almost completely renovated by the owner. Though he never lived in the place, he put his personal touches everywhere, including on one of the seven fireplaces. It features an inlay that looks like a champagne bottle. The gourmet kitchen, featuring high-end appliances, leads out to a room dedicated simply to eating breakfast.

Most fab features:

- » A door taken from a castle in Italy
- » A master bathroom that takes up almost the entire top level and offers a shower with nine Kohler body jets, a hand-held sprayer and rain fall nozzle.
- » A deck specially wired so guests can watch a flat-screen TV outside
- » An elevator shaft, just waiting on the owner to install an elevator
- » An 800-square-foot coach house and enough garage space for, as Johnson described it, "two cars and two Hummers."
- » A pool, approximately a 7-footer, in the unfinished basement

Fresh—and mobile

Rehabbed CTA bus to deliver produce to neighborhoods in need

Chicago Tribune

In Steven Casey's Englewood neighborhood, milk and eggs, bread and bologna are easy to find.

"In the 'hood, you can get meat all day long," he said. "It may not be good meat, but it's there."

What's more difficult to find, Casey said, are what his family and neighbors need so desperately: fresh bananas, apples, spinach, broccoli, kale and other fruits and vegetables that could improve their health.

Shortly after a 2006 study labeled his community a food desert, Casey and a group of self-proclaimed food activists started working to correct that inequity.

Next month, their new grassroots organization, Food Desert Action, will unveil a solution to the healthy food crisis—a renovated CTA bus transformed into a mobile produce stand.

The concept is simple, Casey said. If resi-

PLOTTING A PATTERN

A July 2006 study found that residents on Chicago's South and West sides had to travel twice as far to access grocery stores. The communities are littered with fast food restaurants with fatty, processed foods. According to the study, commissioned by LaSalle Bank, residents who live in food deserts are more likely to die prematurely and at greater rates from cancer, diabetes, heart disease and obesity.

dents in poor neighborhoods can't make it to stores that carry healthy food, the Fresh Moves bus will bring produce to them.

"Eventually, we want to be just like the ice cream truck," Casey said. "Everyone remembers the music, they hear it and they know ice cream is there. When they see our bus, we want them to know fresh fruits and vegetables are here."

The idea of mobile produce stands to serve food deserts isn't new. There are mobile produce markets in Buffalo, N.Y., Salt Lake City and New Orleans, and legislation recently was approved in Trenton, N.J., to help further efforts there.

But the Fresh Moves commercial food bus is the first of its kind in Chicago, city officials said.

The idea was developed by four local residents who decided they couldn't wait for large retailers to serve troubled neighborhoods.

Rather than rely on residents to get to a market, Fresh Moves will deliver affordable, healthy food to their struggling communities block by block. And instead of focusing on profit, Fresh Moves' mission is to address social issues that arise in communities where the food selection is abysmal.

"This is about reaching a vulnerable population," Casey said. "We are, hopefully, attacking the issue of food access and unemployment radically different."

Blago: My life's a country song

Chicago Tribune

Broke and facing prison time, Rod Blagojevich, some might say, already has a life like a country song.

But, in a court filing last week, he practically made it official by likening his marriage to that of country superstars Faith Hill and Tim McGraw.

The comparison comes as federal prosecutors asked a judge to block the airing of part of a secretly recorded phone call in which Blagojevich was talking to his wife, Patti, about Hill. The government argued the discussion was irrelevant and should be excluded from the retrial, set to begin Wednesday.

The former governor's lawyers, however, said the conversation was important because it would show jurors that Blagojevich thinks of himself and Patti as a team, much like Hill and McGraw.

On one of the recordings, Blagojevich can be heard talking about both filling Barack Obama's vacant U.S. Senate seat and getting Patti a job as a Beltway lobbyist. But he interrupted the conversation to talk about Hill with his wife.

The defense said the conversation showed he was considering appointing himself to the Senate and wanted Patti to be able to join him there.

"Faith Hill's widely renowned songs, 'There You'll Be' and 'I Need You' [sung as a duet with her husband, Tim McGraw], both clarify and explain Blagojevich's discussion that immediately follow about his wife joining him in Washington, D.C., if he appointed himself Senator," the defense wrote.

Maggie Daley to remain in hospital 'a couple of days'

Chicago's first lady, Maggie Daley, is expected to remain in Northwestern Memorial Hospital for "a couple of days" after being admitted there Saturday morning with what a spokeswoman said was pain in her right leg.

Daley, who was diagnosed with cancer in 2002, had the leg surgically reinforced with a titanium rod last year.

Jacquelyn Heard, spokeswoman for Mayor Daley, said earlier that Maggie Daley's doctor confirmed that the discomfort was related to the titanium rod and is not an indication that her cancer has worsened. TRIBUNE

Storm death toll rises

A man steps through the remains of a home Sunday in Raleigh, N.C., after tornadoes tore through the region, killing dozens of people. GETTY IMAGES

RALEIGH, N.C. Three days of violent storms and tornadoes across the southern U.S. killed at least 43 people, wrecked hundreds of buildings and downed power lines, officials said on Sunday.

North Carolina accounted for the bulk of casualties and property losses, with 22 people killed and more than 80 injured in a string of tornadoes that ripped through the state Saturday night.

Houses were flattened, cars and trucks tossed like matchsticks and planes blown off the tarmac at a local airport. Uprooted trees, poles and debris snapped power lines, cutting electricity to more than 200,000 people in North Carolina.

Tornadoes moved through 13 other states, including Virginia, where officials reported four deaths and unconfirmed reports of three more. Virginia emergency officials said that 177 structures were damaged by the severe weather.

Dominion Virginia Power said the two nuclear reactors at its Surry Power Station in southeastern Virginia shut down automatically on Saturday when an apparent tornado touched down and cut off an electrical feed to the station.

Backup generators operated normally and both units "are in safe and stable condition," the utility said in a statement.

Patrick Sharp (10), who scored in the second period, battles for the puck with Vancouver defenseman Kevin Bieksa (3) during the first period Sunday. US PRESSWIRE

Patrick Sharp

He had a strong start with two shots on goal out of the Blackhawks' 16 in the first period. One in particular perhaps was the best scoring chance of the series. In the second period, Sharp tied the game on a Hawks power play off a slick pass from Toews from behind the net, ending a drought in which Sharp had scored just once in the past 14 games.

Sharp's tally was as important a goal as the Hawks have scored all season after the Canucks clicked twice in a 54-second span on Christian Ehrhoff and Daniel Sedin goals to take a 2-1 lead midway through the second period. He finished with four shots on goal, tied with Jonathan Toews and Duncan Keith for the team lead.

Patrick Kane

On an early 5-on-3 advantage for the Hawks, Kane had a golden opportunity to give the Hawks a two-goal lead. Off a rebound on a Jonathan Toews miss, Kane looked to have an open net, but Roberto Luongo made an impressive stretch save on the glove side. He earned a secondary assist in the second on Patrick Sharp's goal to tie the game.

In the deciding third period, Kane had a point-blank shot blocked again by Luongo. It was that kind of night—and has been that kind of series—for last season's Stanley Cup hero.

VERDICT

While it was a better showing for the Blackhawks' Fab Four, they could not come through when it mattered most. The result: a 3-0 Canucks edge in the best-of-seven series.

1 When John Scott's in a Blackhawks playoff game it's like coming to a party I throw. You're gonna end up CLOCKED OUT!	... everyone looks shorter.	... blood will be shed! Heads will be cracked! The ability to skate will be optional!	... Marty Turco bets five bucks on the Canucks.	Wait! You're thinking of dressing him? Haven't we seen enough useless posts in this series?
2 What could go wrong when the United Center changes from ice to court?	Now when Derrick Rose slashes to the hoop, he hits a triple axle before hurting some poor forward's feelings.	Somehow, "Disney on Ice: Toy Story 3" becomes involved.	Benny the Bull might pull a hammy on the slick floor.	Nothing. DRose handles that job too.	Someone forgets to tell John Scott to go home and he gets mistaken for a section of boards.
3 What's different about the 2011 version of the Vancouver Canucks?	Other than the fact that they actually showed up this year?	Vancouver's best-known puppet commentator is even more annoying this time around.	Fewer tears, more goals. Drat.	No fear of being "Byfugliened."	Truth? They don't hate the Hawks this time. They just know they're better.
4 What awaits Tyler Hansbrough in Bulls-Pacers Game 2?	The same thing he faced in college: Me boozing the ever-loving crap out of him.	Sorry, as a UNC alum it's against my religion to bad-mouth Tyler. Also: Shut up, Ernest.	The wrath of Big Sexy, Part 2.	Hopefully NOT Carlos Boozer. I guess you don't get defense for $80 million.	The defensive hologram they call Carlos Boozer.
5 What'd we miss in sports while focusing on the NHL and NBA playoffs?	Sarah "Pain Train" Spain and I advanced to the regionals in the World Series of Dice.	Fragrance model David Beckham uncharacteristically backed out of a soccer game.	People hit, caught, drove, shot, pitched, blocked and served stuff. There. All caught up.	Greg Olsen getting no love from Stevenson High School. Mike Martz must be their principal.	I tweaked a groin playing Wii bowling. Not true. But I did go to the E.R. to have a nurse look at it.

Gloom and broom

The White Sox wrapped up their homestand against the L.A. Angels on Sunday afternoon, knowing that 26 of the next 33 games are on the road.

Beating the Angels is never easy and Sunday presented an extra challenge for Sox hitters because Dan Haren was starting. He came into the game with a 0.73 earned-run average and was good enough again for a 4-2 victory and a sweep of the series.

"This is the American League. Every day you face a good pitching staff," manager Ozzie Guillen said. "But the last couple of days we haven't swung the bats the way we think we should be."

Anticipating a low-scoring game and trying to help his starter Mark Buehrle, Guillen put veteran Omar Vizquel at third base instead of Mark Teahen, who is not as strong defensively.

Defense didn't help early, as the Angels scored in the first inning on a double by Maicer Izturis, single by Howard Kendrick and sacrifice fly by Torii Hunter. Izturis ignited another rally in the third inning with a double, scoring this time on a double by Bobby Abreu.

The Angels made it 3-0 in the fourth on a home run by Mark Trumbo and 4-0 in the sixth.

White Sox right fielder Carlos Quentin heads to the dugout Sunday after scoring on a single against the Angels. The White Sox lost, 4-2. NUCCIO DINUZZO/TRIBUNE

The Cubs battled back from an early deficit in a see-saw game, but Colorado broke it open with four two-out runs off Marcos Mateo in the eighth inning to win 9-5.

» In a wild finish at Talladega Superspeedway, Jimmie Johnson edged Clint Bowyer by .002 to win the NASCAR Spring Cup Series' Aaron's 499. The race featured 88 lead changes.

» The slumping Fire suffered their third straight loss Sunday as visiting L.A. scored single goals in each half on the way to a 2-1 Major League Soccer victory at Toyota Park.

EDITION

By Lisa Arnett and Emily Van Zandt

When you step into a club, the entire staff—from the doorman to the go-go girls—is there to make sure you have a killer time. Take a look at these friendly faces from two new clubs (plus one due to open any day now) and keep your eye out for them on your next night out. LISA ARNETT AND EMILY VAN ZANDT ARE

Gig: Bartender at 8 Fifty 8 (858 W. Lake St.)
Age: 24
Lives in: West Loop
Has also worked at: Griffin Lounge, V Live

What's the best part of working in a club?
I am able to get ready, go out, see friends, hear good music and make money all at the same time. Can't find a better job than that!

What's the strangest request you've ever gotten from a customer?

A handful of times, individuals have asked me if I had a phone charger for their cell phone. I am a bartender, not an Apple store.

Favorite off-duty hangouts?
Besides 8 Fifty 8, I enjoy going to Pops for Champagne, Bull &

Bear, and the Beer Bistro.

What makes a great club bartender?

Their knowledge behind the bar, quick service, outgoing personality and a winning smile.

When did you get your first professional gig dancing at a club?

SD: Well, if you really want me to go way back, it was at a 16-plus dance club called Zero Gravity in Naperville where I got my first go-go dancing gig.
VB: In 2005, a friend and I answered an ad for a Halloween party at a Chicago club [Sound Bar] and we tried it out just for fun. I was dressed as a cop that night and that's where the dancing began.

Valerie Betancourt

Gig: Go-go dancer at Hearts (1115 N. Branch St.)
Age: 29
Lives in: Gold Coast
Has also danced at: Cuvee, Enclave, The Mid, Spybar and now-closed Crobar

How do you two know each other?

SD: Ever since we've crossed paths at Enclave, where we danced together for the very first time, Valerie and I have become great friends and always love working with one another.

What role do dancers play in the vibe of a club?

SD: The go-go dancer is like the frosting on top of a cupcake. It always adds that little extra flavor to the club.

VB: Dancers are there to fill the room with energy and eye candy. We're there to make your clubbing experience a positive one and to get you to dance and enjoy yourself.

Sweeta Desai

Gig: Go-go dancer at Hearts
Age: 22
Lives in: South Loop
Has also danced at: Cuvee, Enclave, Griffin Lounge, The Mid, Spybar

James Oraha

Gig: Co-owner of soon-to-open Tzar Ultra Lounge (215 W. Ontario St.)
Age: 32
Lives in: Lincolnwood

What do you like about working in the nightlife industry? This will be my first experience. It's been a dream to run my own club, and living my dream while making a living works really well.

What do you like most about Chicago's nightlife scene? All the different walks of life that hang in the same places, from brokers to real estate developers to lawyers, doctors, students, recent college grads. I enjoy watching this melting pot enjoying life.

Strangest request from a customer? Someone asked me to be her boyfriend for the weekend 'cause [she] had [her] high school reunion. I had only met her twice but agreed and we had a great time.

Favorite drink? Soda, cranberry, Red Bull, bitters and vodka. I call it the "Ya Menyak!" [a line from "You Don't Mess With the Zohan"].

Taurus April 20-May 20

One minute you're ready to get married. The next, you're daydreaming about hooking up with your college lover. A moon opposition is making you schizophrenic. It's best not to elope to Vegas just yet.

Gemini May 21-June 21

With Mercury preparing to go direct, you're starting to feel a little better about recent melodrama. So your girlfriend decided she wants to date other women or your guy is joining the military. You can move past this.

Cancer June 22-July 22

You're realizing how important it is to surround yourself with positive people. A person close to you has been driving you nuts with a doom-and-gloom attitude. The moon is reminding you to avoid toxic types.

Leo July 23-Aug. 22

With Venus moving into a friendly sign, your dry spell is about to end. Just a few weeks ago, nobody was returning your calls. Now everybody wants to party with you. Type "major flirtation" into your social calendar.

Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22

When Mercury, your planetary ruler, goes direct later in the week, you'll feel 100 times better. You'll stop planning revenge on your ex. Dating and romance suddenly will seem appealing instead of sickening.

Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23

You're driving the significant other crazy with your flaky attitude. You show up two hours late for an important date or you forget to walk the dog. A practical sun is urging you to be more grounded and, like, get a clue.

Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 21

You could fall for someone pushy, strong-willed and opinionated—in other words, your long-lost twin. Mars is kicking up powerful feelings of attraction to someone you'd normally be threatened by. But like attracts like.

Sagittarius Nov. 22-Dec. 21

Sometimes you find it hard to trust your intuition, even when it's giving you warning signals. Neptune says listen to your gut. Maybe that guy you picked up has a side business as a hired killer. Perhaps that girl you're enamored with has a history as a paid escort.

Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19

A relationship could be more tension-filled than usual, thanks to the moon. Things will either build to a crescendo and then get better, or they'll just explode. Hopefully, you can remain calm and composed throughout.

Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 18

You'll be drawn to music this week as an artistic sun inspires you to embrace your creative side. You'll compose a torch song for a former flame. You'll do karaoke without needing three beers to calm your nerves.

Pisces Feb. 19-March 20

With Venus leaving your sign this week, you'll realize that you've gone through some major romantic transitions lately. You've fallen in love, fallen in lust or fallen out of love. These changes are good, even if you feel a bit scared or out of control.

by Common—real name: Lonnie Rashid Lynn Jr.—and acceptance speeches by the honorees.

"When I first heard him, I knew he was rare ... so talented," Angelou said about Common. She then joked about the first time they met, saying, "I found him, and he knew me. ... That shows you he had a [strong] upbringing."

It was ladies' night at Common's inaugural Common Ground Foundation gala Saturday.

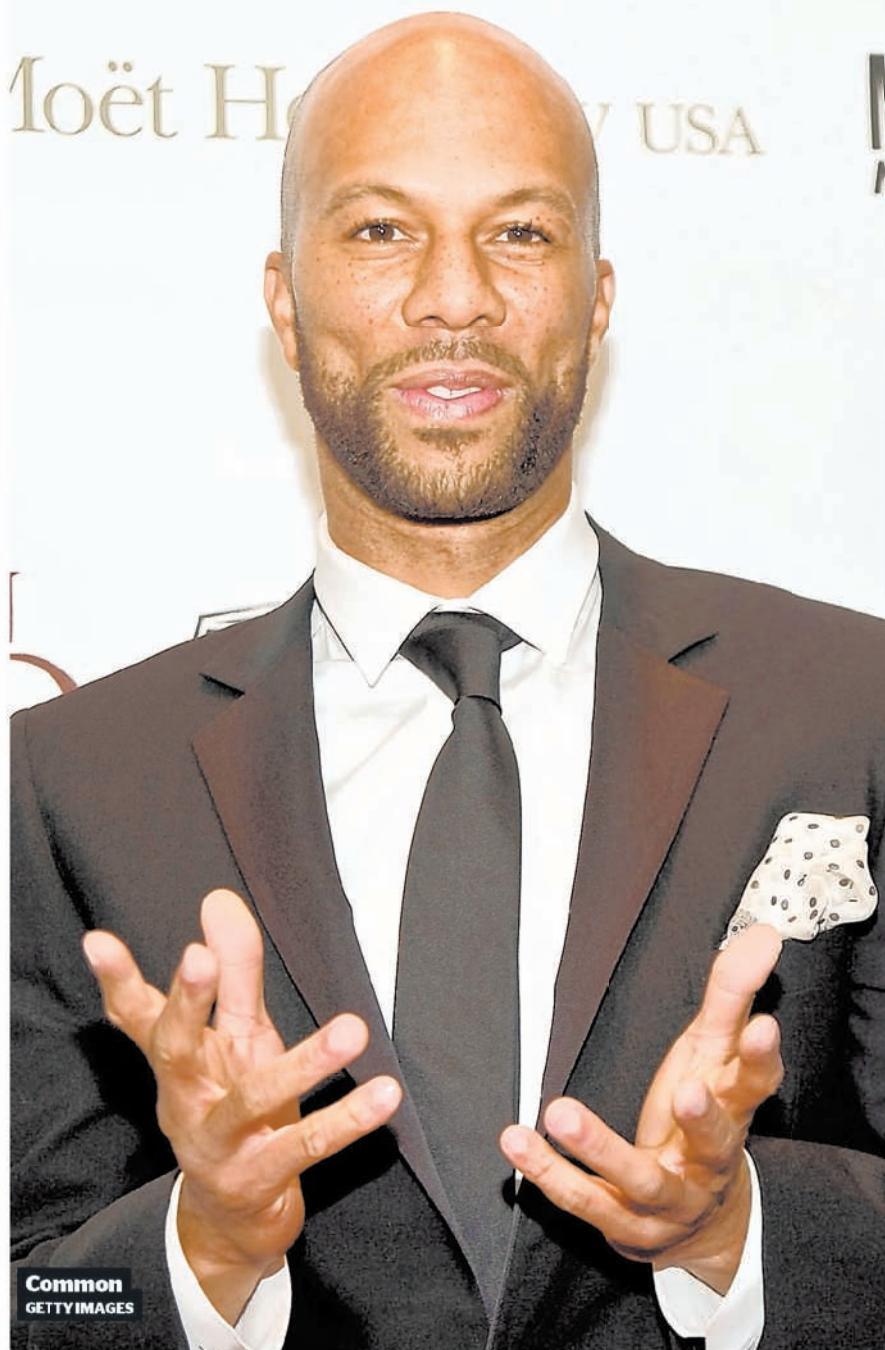

The Chicago rapper/actor's fundraiser at the InterContinental hotel honored women in leadership—including poet Dr. Maya Angelou, "The View" co-host and Chicago native Sherri Shepherd, and "True Jackson, VP" star and Robbins, Ill., native Keke Palmer—and benefitted the foundation's urban youth-focused programs.

"I think it says he loves women," Palmer said about Common's decision to celebrate successful women. "I bet he treats his mother real well. It definitely makes me feel good that he had me out here."

"I love what he's doing, helping kids. Not only is he talking to them, letting them know anything is possible, he's giving them the resources to make it happen. That's what I love."

Mayor-elect Rahm Emanuel, former NBA All-Star Antoine Walker and White Sox General Manager Kenny Williams also attended the benefit (Williams presented Common with a retro White Sox jersey).

LO BLOW

Coachella was like, "forget you," after Cee Lo Green arrived late to the music fest Friday in Indio, Calif. "It ain't my fault," Green told the angry crowd when he took the stage, according to latimes.com. "They should have ... given me a better time slot." Green left the stage when organizers pulled the plug in the middle of his sixth song, the site reported.

All revved up

We're highly suspicious that Lady Gaga wasn't born this way. The singer tweeted the cover art for her upcoming album this weekend, featuring her head and arms superimposed on a glistening motorcycle. Time to start getting revved up—the album drops May 23.

Nice move, Dog

From the "You Can't Make This Stuff Up" files comes this story: Dog the Bounty Hunter (aka Duane Chapman) bailed out Nicolas Cage over the weekend after the Oscar-winning actor was arrested in New Orleans following an argument with his wife over whether the house they were in front of was theirs, according to reports from eonline.com and The Associated Press.

Power 'Ranger'

Ryan Gosling might be ready to saddle up. The "Blue Valentine" star is in talks to star in Disney's "The Lone Ranger" alongside Johnny Depp, who already has signed on to play the sidekick, Tonto, according to thewrap.com. The old TV show never was this sexy. (Not that we're complaining.)

Chicago's got talent

Simon Cowell is coming! Well, not Cowell ... but his people are coming! Open auditions for "The X Factor," the new show from the former "American Idol" judge, will be held April 27 at the Sears Centre Arena in Hoffman Estates. Registration is April 26.
